AL. PALZER'S DEATH REMOVES ANOTHER OF THE WHITE HOPES

The second of the original crop of white hopes to meet death by violence was marked down when Al Palzer, died recently from the effects of a gunshot wound inflicted by his father. Strangely, it was Luther McCarthy, the man who suddenly ended Palzer's ambitions, who was the other white challenger to be taken off suddenly. Shortly before McCarthy met his death in the ring during his bout with Arthur Pecky, Palzer met McCarthy on the coast and was stopped. Previous to that he had been getting along well, though a novice at the fight game. He had leaped to fame in a night by stopping floorboarder, Wells, the wonder-boxer from England. Shortly after his bout with McCarthy Palzer came east, but contracted malaria while training on Staten Island and was forced to give up the fight game. Recently he had been acting as a sparring partner for Fred Fulton, and intended soon to return to the ring game. Tom O'Rourke, one of the wisest of ring men, was authority for the statement that Palzer was one of the finest heavyweights he had ever seen. A disagreement between them led to an open rupture and resulted indirectly in Palzer's retirement. Mike Collins, now Fulton's manager, also was piloting big Al and declared he believed Palzer would be ready to sing a very effective comeback.

It is not believed President Wilson will ask the big leagues to call off the dogs, but the probability of its being played earlier than usual is very strong. The fact that the draft will be in actual operation at the time when the games generally are played will be one reason. Shortening the schedules would be easy.

MORRIS MILLER

Failing to reach Vic Saier by mail, the Pittsburgh club sent a special emissary to Lansing, Mich., to learn what the plans of the first baseman might be with regard to joining the Pirates. Saier refused to talk business, saying that he still is on the payroll of the Cubs he would not be "tampered" with. Though it was explained to him that he had been awarded to the Pirates he remained obdurate. The "tampering" business may be on the other foot if Barney Dreyfuss gets busy.

The Giants saved the east from total wreck in the recent inter-sectional clash with the teams from the west. McGraw's men won twelve of the fifteen games they played. Boston managed to break even in twenty, while Brooklyn, in seventeen games lost, one more than it won. The poor Phillies were able to win but four games out of thirteen. The Reds, of course, led the west in wins, with twelve out of eighteen, the Cardinals won eight and lost nine, Pittsburgh won seven and lost ten, and the Cubs won but five out of fourteen played.

Al Mammaux was working under a peculiar contract with the Pittsburgh club. He was to draw a salary of $5,000 for the season. Only $200 a month of this was to be paid him, however, and the rest retained by the club. If he behaved himself and pitched good ball he was to get the balance at the close of the season. If he fell from grace it was to be forfeited. Mammaux has fallen from grace all right and in Pittsburgh they are speculating on what settlement he will get from the Pittsburgh club.

Gennie Mack, his team having an off day, went out to see the Cardinals beat the Phillies. He commented in an interview on his impression in which he declared the Cardinals team one of great possibilities. He picked Hornsby and Cruise as two of the greatest players he had ever seen and said Meadows is one grand hurler. Hornsby, Mack said.

Tony Boeckel just got set with the Pirates when a bounding ball hit him over the eye, laying the scalp open and making a nasty wound. He will be on the bench for a few days as a result. Chuck Ward was given a chance to show what he could do at third as a result of Boeckel's injury.

Manager Hugo Bezdek of the Pirates will not give up college athletics. It is announced that after the close of the major league season he will return to Eugene, Ore., to resume his duties at the University of Oregon as coach. During the winter, no doubt, Barney Dreyfuss will have acquired a new manager. They say he already has a "little man in mind."

Jimmy Sheppard, nominally coach for the Chicago Cubs but actually at work as athletic director at the naval training station near Chicago, has forty-eight baseball teams organized among the 2,000 rookies in camp and says that out of all the players under his wing he is going to develop some major leaguers for use when Uncle Sam is done with them.

Checking of the draft figures on Cincinnati players shows that Hod Eller was the only one in the first call, but since his home town of Danville, Ill., already has more than filled its quota by voluntary enlistment even he will not have to go. Eddie Roush stands 1,210 in the call list, which means he will not be in the first army drawn.

DAMAGE SUIT HALTS EDGERTON STREET WORK

Edgerton, Aug. 8.—The city of Edgerton and the Cast Stone Construction company were served with an injunction this morning restraining them from further work on the paving of West Fulton street. F. F. Burg was the plaintiff on the injunction, and the bondsmen were L. Puerner, E. Kaufman and F. P. Burg.

The work on the street has progressed to within 100 feet of Mechanic street, and will undoubtedly be tied up in the courts for at least a month. The injunction says in part that the grade for the street which was established was illegal and by excavating the property of the plaintiff has been damaged and that an order from the court commissioner has been secured to prevent completion of the work. The real controversy is, however, over the width of the pavement that is called for in the specifications of the contract.

Excavating for the pavement on North Main street was begun this morning.

MAYOR HOAN URGES DIRECT MARKETING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 8.—From the producer to the consumer, if that will help cut down the price of food grown in Wisconsin, is to be the plan of the marketing committee of the State Council of Defense.

Mayor D. W. Hoan of Milwaukee appeared before the committee today to explain some of the details of the work proposed in that city.

Mayor Hoan was firm in his position that every move should be studied carefully. He was not inclined to rush into the task of marketing the products of Wisconsin farms in the wholesale way, but was anxious that some immediate steps be taken to force down prices.

A description of the Milwaukee public markets by Mayor Hoan interested the committee, and it was decided to urge county councils to establish such markets in other cities.

Mayor Hoan's advice was to proceed slowly, starting with curb markets until the proper locations were found by experience.

Under the new state law the state council has authority to confiscate foodstuffs if prices are too high. No drastic action is expected. It was the sense of the committee that reasonable profits should be allowed for the middleman and the retail merchant, but that there were unnecessary costs which could be eliminated.

Mayor Hoan told the committee that Milwaukee would have its machinery ready to undertake the distribution end of the work within a week.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

This great war that we are engaged in is making history and also repeating history. Recently the press dispatches announced that the king of England has proclaimed that the name of Windsor had been adopted by the royal family of England in place of any family name as the official cognomen of future generations of English royalty. It is interesting to note just what this proclamation means and its wording, and through the columns of the Daily Chronicle of London, received at this office, the royal edict is given as well as the comment upon it.

By the KING.
Declaring that the name of Windsor is to be borne by His Royal House and Family, and relinquishing the use of all other titles and dignities.—George R. L.

Whereas, we, having taken into consideration the name and title of our royal house and family, have determined that henceforth our house and family shall be styled and known as the house and family of Windsor;

And whereas we have further determined for ourselves and for and on behalf of our descendants and all other the descendants of our grand-children Queen Victoria of blessed and glorious memory to relinquish and discontinue the use of all German titles and dignities;

And whereas we have declared these our determinations in our privy council;

Now, therefore, we, out of our royal will and authority, do hereby declare and announce to you from the date of this our royal proclamation that the house and family shall be styled and known as the house and family of Windsor, and that all the descendants in the male line of our said grandmother, Queen Victoria, who are subjects of these realms, other than female descendants who may marry or may have married, shall bear the said name of Windsor.

And do hereby further declare and announce that we for ourselves and for and on behalf of our descendants and all other the descendants of our said grandmother, Queen Victoria, who are subjects of these realms, relinquish and enjoin the discontinuance of the use of the degrees, styles, dignities, titles and honours of dukes and duchesses of Saxony and princes and princesses of Saxony-Coburg and Gotha, and all other German degrees, styles, dignities, titles, honours and appellations to us or to their heretofore belonging or appertaining.

What the Change Means.
Henceforth the reigning dynasty in Great Britain and Ireland will cease to be a branch, and the most exalted branch, of the house of Saxony-Coburg-Gotha.

The royal dynasty became that of Saxony-Coburg-Gotha with the accession of King Edward VII, whose father, the prince consort, was Prince Albert of Saxony-Coburg-Gotha. In the 19th century this almost obscure German ducal family had attained an extraordinary position among the reigning houses of Europe. Its ascendancy was owed very largely to the personal qualities and great ability of Queen Victoria's uncle, King Leopold I of Belgium, and its greatest achievement was undoubtedly the marriage of Prince Albert to our late queen. To the same house belong the royal dynasties of Belgium and Bulgaria, and the deposed royal dynasty of Portugal.

But the change goes further than the foundation of a new Windsor dynasty. Not only is the royal house to be styled "the house of Windsor," but the family's surname becomes Windsor. As the title of prince and princess is henceforth limited to the children and grandchildren of the sovereign, it follows that a great-grandson of a British monarch will be plain "Mr. Windsor." His great-grandsons, too, will be commoners, but will bear the courtesy title of Lord Windsor, if we assume that the custom still prevails of crowning the sovereign's sons as dukes.

Windsor is certainly a good choice of name. Even before the conquest the kings had a royal hunting lodge at Windsor. The first two Henrys and John lived in the castle, and Edward III was born there. It was used by the Tudors as one of their favorite palaces, and through the nineteenth century it was regarded more or less as the headquarters of the royal family.

The British royal house has in the past borne various names that might have been revived with advantage—Plantagenet, York, Lancaster, Tudor, Stuart, O'Hara (Queen Anne), and Guolph—but for historical and other reasons it was impossible that any of them should be revived for the present dynasty. Windsor as a territorial title, however, may be likened to Lancaster and York, and the matter is entirely English and native in history and associations.

THE GIFT OF COMMAND.

Many young men who are taking training this summer at the military camps do not fully realize what a personal benefit they will derive from it. They are generously giving their time and effort from motives of patriotism. They are willing to sacrifice life itself if need be. Meanwhile, as usually happens to those who make generous sacrifices, they are going to reap certain personal benefits in a large measure.

What they are getting was illustrated by the remark of a young man who recently attended a military school. He said that it had done him a world of good in training the ability to command men. That is not so common a gift.

Plenty of men can issue directions, but they don't have the force or the brains to back them up. But to get in the habit of leading the fellows, and to do it in a surly way without question, is a superb acquisition, and one of enormous help toward business success.

It is a queer thing that the people who are bold and have self-confidence and self-assertion very frequently lack a sound foundation of judgment on which confidence can be built. Meanwhile the fellows who have solid ability are often over modest. Their lack of confidence is a great barrier to success.

Military training, particularly the training given men who are to be officers, should bring out both the leadership and good judgment in equal measure. The young officer learns to command with the voice of authority. Also he learns it is of no use to command unless he knows the work to be done and how it should be done. With training in both these directions, a basis for all around success in any career is given.

TREE TRIMMING.

In many places in the city the lack of tree trimming in an efficient manner is much in evidence. Long, low boughs extend over the streets and sweep the tops of umbrellas on the sidewalks despite the ordinance that prescribes they must be cut to such and such a height. Let a merchant down town place a dry good bag in front of his store for more than a reasonable period to remove its contents and the box itself and we find the police most efficient. Let a stranger park an automobile within the prescribed districts of the bridge and north and south Main or Milwaukee streets and the bridge approaches and they are ordered out, yet we see hundreds of trees in the residential sections of the city that are a disgrace to the city and persons on high roads that drive beneath them. Enforce the ordinance or wipe it off the books. The Court House park has been trimmed up properly, showing how trees should look when properly cared for. Let this work be continued in other city parks and then if the property-owners do not obey the law have their trees trimmed and tax them for it.

NOT NECESSARY.

It is not necessary to call a special session of the legislature to enforce the Sunday closing ordinances. The law is on the statute books and all the local authorities have to do is to see it is enforced. It does not take a governor of the state to tell them what to do beyond calling to their remembrance the local authorities to their remembrance. Then, if this is not done steps can be taken, but it is not necessary to call a special session of the legislature for this purpose. If the liquor referendum bill had become a law after being passed by both houses there would have been no talk in this direction as the people would have decided the question. However, it was voted and now we must take the consequences.

It is amazing how much better an ordinary old fashioned ham sandwich tastes when it is served at a fashionable tea room with a fancy name like the Green Dandelion or the Corner Cupboard.

It must be a surprise to the mothers whose boys will never do any kitchen work, to find how efficient dish-wipers they have become since they went with the girls on the camping trip.

After exhorting our young men to offer their lives to their country's service, some of our people will growl because the food economists don't provide them with any wheat bread.

Do you notice that when an automobile climbs the wall and strews its occupants in the ditch, it was never going more than twelve or fifteen miles an hour?

The ruling powers of Germany generously offer to establish democratic institutions provided the democracy does whatever the rulers want.

The people who are really worrying about this war are not those who will risk their lives, but those who may lose a dollar in their business.

So far as heard from, none of the Kaiser's agents has offered any objection to the long and exhaustive debate over the food bill.

Considering the way the Kaiser rushes from one front to the other, it is hoped he has the foresight to buy a mileage ticket.

The recent ship building corporation was a superb organization except in the single respect that it didn't build any ships.

It is confidently predicted that the Russians will stop running by the time they get to the Pacific coast.

It is very wrong to deport the I. W. W. as it is so cruel to the places to which they are deported.

The Daily Novelette

Help.

It was a red letter day in the Stocks family when Pristine, only daughter of old Stocks, the buttonhole king, graduated from Bindage College with a canary-skin diploma certifying that she had completed the course in first aid. Nay, more—that she was a member of the Bindage Emergency League and likely to be called on at any moment.

The moment arrived, in fact, while she was reading her diploma aloud to the family. She was summoned to the telephone, she asked breathlessly, "man, fractured his scapula!" at Dwell's? "I'll run right around!" And hastily she buttoned on her cap and hurried out in the direction of the Dwell Monkey Wrench Works.

She was half way there when she remembered that she had forgotten her tool bag. "Pshaw!" she muttered, and ran back for it and started out again. This time she was three-quarters way there when the thought struck her that perhaps they wouldn't let her take charge unless she had her diploma. So she went back and got it, and was within sight of Dwell's with it under her arm when she realized that it would have been much quicker in the first place to have come in Dwell's car.

She ran back, ordered the automobile, and drove at top speed to the monkey wrench works, where she fell off the seat in a dead faint from exhaustion. She was carried inside, and the doctor who was attending the injured man hurriedly left him to revive her, during which operation the injured man died of neglect.

Willis—See the crowd going in to view Deadbeak's remains. He must have been well liked. Gillis—No; those are collectors who were never able to see him while he was alive.—Puck.

THOUGHTS OF A SOLDIER

Since men with life must purchase life
And some must die that more may
Unto the Great Cashier of strife
A fine accounting let me give.
Perhaps tomorrow I shall stand
Before his cage, and plead and beg
New splendor for my native land:
Oh God, then bravely let me die!

If after I shall fall, shall rise
I shall not grudge my sacrifice,
Although I pay the price alone.
It still more beautiful to see
The Stars and Stripes o'er men
And finer shall my country be
Tomorrow let me find my grave.

Tonight life seems so fair and sweet
And hark! I hear the staking here,
And hate and lust and foul deceit
Hang heavy on the atmosphere.
Injustice seeks to throttle right,
And laughter's song is choked and dim.
If each can take so great a blight
From human lives, then let me die.

If death must be the cost of life,
And freedom's terms are human
Into the thickest of the strife
Then let me go to pay the tolls.
I would enrich my native land,
New splendor to my native land,
And where I fall shall freedom stand,
And where I die shall freedom live.

Tomorrow death with me may trade;
Let me not quibble o'er the price;
But may I, once the bargain's made,
With courage meet the sacrifice.
If happiness for ages long
My little term of life may buy,
God, for my country, make me strong
Tomorrow let me bravely die.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

INDEED.

Oh, some may call him stern and cold
And some may call him queer.
And some may pan the honest man
That we are praising here.

But we will stum the poet's lyre
And hum a roundelay:
To please a whim, in praise of Him
"Who hasn't much to say."

For though He's silent as a rule
And though his words are few,
He doesn't make the ear to ache
As many others do.

He doesn't bluster in a fit
O'er matters that are slight,
He doesn't prate from soon till late,
From morning till the night.

We prize him more than those who no
And prattle all the day,
Who talk a lot but who have got
Not anything to say!

HAPPY THOUGHT.

It is well to be cool, but even a
Cucumber is sometimes in a pickle.

Easy.

"Wealth brings but trouble, lackaday!"

Says grasping old McDubble,
And saying which he turns away
And goes to hunt more trouble.

Lots of people are red-headed
When they are caught red-handed.

Fisherman.

Anyone can be a fisherman if he has the time to give to it and is susceptible to flies. After sitting in a rowboat all day waiting for a fish to bite, a nervous person would have hysterics if anything suddenly happened. A first-class fisherman never has hysterics.

This would scare away the fish.
You will soon see your mistake if you have a fit when you get a bite.
The fish is quick to seize his advantage and swims away with the pole before you can get back in the boat.

A first-class fisherman can sit all day in a rowboat without worrying about the bites he doesn't get and without scratching the ones he does.
Nothing can perturb an A. No. 1 fisherman. He isn't fussy. He likes sitting down and doing nothing and of the two he prefers the latter. But he likes to sit down to do it.
It may profit the reader to interest himself in the fisherman's character.
At the next opportunity endeavor to startle a fisherman. If possible reach out and whack him playfully or splash a large stone near him. Ten chances to one he will not leave off fishing.
If he does he may run after you.

The Timid Motorist.

When first the little boat is his
He swears he'll never scot or whizz,
He's sure he'll never let her out
Or burn 'em up or run about.
And so he tells his friends who jeer
And laugh and grin from ear to ear.
Says he, "Nix on the speedy stuff."
Ten miles an hour is quite enough.
But when he says his new auto is only a toy, he only says so
For when another month has passed
He'll have the bug for going fast.
The new ones are the timid ones.
We wish that all of them were new.

AT TIMES MOST ANYONE
WILL HAVE HIS LAPSE.
BUT THE WORST IS HAD BY HIM WHO LAPS IT UP.

The world takes any man at his own estimate of himself.
Any man except the Kaiser.

EIGHTY-FIVE ARRESTS MADE IN JANESVILLE DURING MONTH OF JULY

Eighty-five arrests were made in Janesville during the month of July, according to the report filed yesterday with the city commission by Chief of Police Champion. Of this number, by far the great majority were, as usual, for drunkenness. Fifty-nine being hailed into the lockup for over-assault with John Burleycorn. Four arrests were made for driving automobiles while intoxicated, and four more for disorderly conduct on public streets. Two "suspects" were arrested, two were taken for highway robbery, while other arrests were made for larceny, failure to have dog licenses, etc.

Of the total arrests, sixty were of a severe enough character to be taken into municipal court, while twenty-five were discharged, usually after a few hours in the station jail.

One hundred and seventy-seven dollars and sixty-seven cents were paid in fines in the municipal court, and $57 in penalties for violation of city ordinances.

Of the arrests, Patrolman Milton Rogers leads the force with fourteen to his credit. CITY'S HEALTH IS

THE BEST IN YEARS

Epidemics of Scarlet Fever and Measles Practically at an End—Urge Sanitation

The city's health has never been better. After a winter of severe epidemics of scarlet fever and measles, these diseases have practically vanished from Janesville, and City Health Officer Dr. S. B. Buckmaster reports today that there are no cases of either of these diseases in the city which will be taken down shortly, and another for measles.

Not a case of diphtheria has been reported for many months, and the only reported cases of all kinds is but little. During the month of July the births exactly equalled the deaths, fifteen of each being reported.

A remarkable scarcity of flies is believed to be one of the main factors in keeping the health of the city up. There have been fewer this summer than in any other summer on record. Dr. Buckmaster attributes this largely to two factors, the increase in the number of automobiles with the consequent falling off in the number of horses, and the increased cleanliness of the city, and the efficiency of the fly-swapping campaign which has been carried into every home in the city. Thirty dollars in awards were paid out to children for keeping their yards and homes clean.

One recommendation made by the health officer in his monthly report to the city commission, is the provision of more sanitary sewage facilities in many of the city's homes. Attention is called to the fact that under the state statutes a city, which has a sewage system, may require property owners to connect their homes with this system, or upon failure to do so, may make the changes itself, assessing the cost with eight per cent interest against the property.

A survey undertaken by Dr. Buckmaster some time ago, revealed the fact that there is in the neighborhood of two thousand outhouses in the city. Some of these have proved the cause of complaint of neighbors because of their unsanitary condition, and in a few cases the matter has been placed before the state health department. These outhouses are being broken up, and attention of Dr. Buckmaster, who is taking the matter up with the owners.

No infantile paralysis has been found in the city, and while there are some cases in the large cities, the entire country seems to be remarkably free from that scourge after the frightful epidemics of last summer.

"If the people will recognize the prime necessity of keeping their premises in a sanitary condition, we will have no epidemics," said Dr. Buckmaster. "The fly problem has been greatly reduced, and if garbage piles are kept well covered, and some of the outhouses are removed and a modern sewage system connecting with the city's system is installed, Janesville will be able to maintain the high standard of health which has prevailed thus far this summer."

NEW TYPE AIRSHIP

MADE AT GREEN BAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 8.—Wisconsin capital, invested in a myriad of war industries, is about to aid the production of new type of aircraft that may be instrumental in defeating the German kaiser.

Since the recent definite plan for creating a vast aerial force for America's war operation came into the hands of congress individuals and corporations throughout the country have interested themselves in bringing the efficiency of the flying machine up to the new maximum. It is reported that approved standard types are to be manufactured exclusively through the provisions of the aircraft board.

However, the Lawson Aircraft corporation, recently greatly enlarged and placed on a firmer footing, is preparing to manufacture a new type which is declared to be superior to any flying machine ever produced.

The machine is the invention of Alfred G. Lawson, general manager of the corporation and formerly associate of Henry Ford, the French aeroplane builder. Mr. Lawson is an aeronautical expert of world wide reputation. The secret of his new machine is with him only.

His company is already building what is claimed to be a superior type of war machine. It is the only company west of Buffalo capable of building machines according to the specifications of United States government aerial officers.

The company was organized last April for the purpose of manufacturing military planes. It was recently reincorporated under Wisconsin laws with a capital of $200,000. Large government orders, expected shortly, necessitated the increase in capital stock.

Officers of the company are: George W. Ellis, president, head of the Britton Cooperage company; F. E. Burroughs, director, head of the Burrall-Hobart company; William Hoberg, director, head of the Hoberg Paper Mill company; George Richardson, treasurer, cashier of the McCarthy National bank; C. I. Smith, secretary, head of the Smith & Shuring Auditing company; Alfred W. Lawson, general manager.

EXAMINE LAST GROUP FOR THE DRAFT ARMY

LOCAL REGISTRATION BOARD COMPLETES WORK OF EXAMINING CANDIDATES THIS AFTERNOON.

EXEMPTIONS ARE NEXT

Stanley G. Dunwiddie Appointed By Governor as Government's Attorney in Charge of Appeal Cases.

Work of examining the first 304 men summoned to report to the local registration and exemption board to fill the first quota of the national army for the northern half of Rock county will be completed this afternoon, the last group of 102 men being disposed of today.

With the physical examinations completed, the board will turn at once to the work of considering claims of exemptions, many of which have already been filed and more of which will come in for the next few days. Not only will the board go over carefully the exemption claims, but it will also forward recommendations in certain cases which will go before the district board at Madison.

As soon as the exemptions allowed by the local board have been decided on, and the lists of those passed and accepted have been prepared, it will be possible to tell just where the district stands as regards completing its quota on the first call. In case there is still lacking sufficient men to make up the 132 required, it will at once become necessary to call up additional men, at least twice as many as the number they still needed, and the process of examining, exemption and filing will be continued until the entire quota is secured.

Thus far the brunt of the work has fallen on the examining physicians, who make out a record sheet for each man, from which the board can easily determine whether the candidate has passed. From ten to fifteen minutes is consumed in examining each man. Particular attention is paid to weight, height, bone and sinew, and to the health conditions. Deafness, poor vision, flat feet and hernia are some of the more common causes for dismissal on physical grounds.

Out of ninety men examined on Tuesday, 66 were passed, 19 were given absolute discharges on the grounds of physical disability and five were given conditional discharges. This makes a total of 125 accepted for the first two days. 33 given absolute discharges, and 26 conditionally discharged. It is impossible to state the number of exemptions which will be asked for, nor can any prediction be made as to the number which shall be allowed by either the local or the district board. With regard to the conditional discharges, they may be called back for re-examination in the discretion of the local board, or they may be passed or exempted by the district board without another examination.

It is probable that District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie, who has been appointed by Governor E. L. Philipp as government attorney for the Janesville district in charge of government appeals from decisions of the local board, will be present at the sessions of the board at which will be taken up the claims for exemption on the ground of dependents. Every precaution will be taken to see to it that all claims are filed according to the prescribed form and that false affidavits have not been presented.

In the Beloit district the examinations of the first 456 men were completed by the examining physicians on Tuesday, and a night session of the board was held to check over the list. The board will take up immediately the exemption claims in the order filed.

In both districts there were few men who failed to appear in most instances those who did not respond in person had either already enlisted or had been transferred to some other board. Doubtful cases will be taken care of with vigor and all necessary steps will be reported to the sheriff's office for prompt disposal.

MUCH SEWING DONE BY PHILOMATHIANS

Club Turns in Large Amount of Work to Red Cross Chapter—Activity to Continue.

Another collection of articles made by the Philomathian club was turned into the headquarters of the Red Cross this afternoon. The list made by this club up to the present time comprises the following: Handkerchiefs, 158; napkins, 147; trawls, 138; bedshoes, 64; hot water bags, 68; washcloths, 376; shoulder straps, 183; surgical aprons, 24; and two suits of pajamas. The material was all furnished by the club and the work was done at the weekly meetings, which have been held regularly for this purpose for some time. The club has planned other work to be done in the near future—probably on convalescent robes, or pajamas. It is intended also to continue the Red Cross work at the regular study meetings of the winter. The programs are to be made very simple this season, with probably one or two papers for each session, so as to allow more time for the sewing.

OFFICERS PREDICT RECORD YEAR FOR JANESVILLE FAIR

Every Department of the Big Fair Has Been Impaired and Enlarged Tremendously.

After months of effort, directors of the Janesville fair, which opens at the local fair grounds on next Tuesday, expect to make the proper use of the work necessary for the production of a fair of the magnitude of this one. To date, fate has been kind, and the only drawback to the new enterprise with the phenomenal success of the fair is the weather.

Never before have there been so many entries before the opening of the fair; never has such an array of fast horses been offered the race loving fans of the county; never have such large prizes and premiums been offered, nor have they ever been apportioned with such care.

Thirteen thousand dollars in actual cash will be given away. Hundreds more are being expended on free attractions, on comfort and conveniences for the guests, on monstrous exhibits. It will be the record fair, not only in the history of the county, but of all county fairs in the state and west.

Over two hundred fast horses will be on the grounds with a day or so. Ten big races have been arranged, three for one thousand dollar purses, and the rest for five hundred dollar purses. Thirteen horses are entered in the 2:06 pace, the fastest race on the card to be held Wednesday, Janesville Day. On the same day the 2:25 pace will be run with seventeen horses entered; also the 2:30 trot with sixteen entries, and the three year old trot, with eleven entries.

On Thursday, "Producers' Day," the feature race will be the 2:14 trot, in which nineteen of the country's fastest trotters are entered. Other races for the day are the 2:15 pace, on Friday, the 2:18 trot with twenty-five entries. On Friday the big race will be the 2:10 pace for a thousand dollar purse, in which seventeen horses will compete.

Under the direction of Mr. J. B. Fletcher, who has been busy today tabulating entries in all events, interest in the school and arts departments seems to be greater this year than ever before. Under the direction of Mr. West, Mr. Antisdel and Mr. Lowth, the matter was put before all the school children of the county, and much excellent work will be on display.

Elaborate plans are being prepared to have attractions of added interest on the different days designated as specially intended for various groups. Children's Day, and all under fourteen years of age will be admitted free of charge. Wednesday, Janesville Day, will provide the best racing program in the county, with many other attractions in the nature of feature races, free shows, entertainments and band concerts. On Thursday, the fair grounds will be the scene of the most interesting of the events and exhibits of interest essentially to dairy farmers: famous cattle breeders and milk producers will be here to give talks and demonstrate the value of their stock.

Something is provided for every minute of the day. The directors are leaving no stone unturned. It will be the only fair in the county, and the best in history.

DUTCH CARTOONIST TO AID U. S. WAKE UP

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] New York, Aug. 8.—Louis Raemker, Dutch cartoonist, on whose head is a price of $12,000, has been asked for showing up the Hun in all his frightfulness, is in America and will attempt to rouse Americans to a full sense of the "brutal Boche," driving home his argument with his powerful cartoons.

Raemker arrived at an American port shortly after playing hide and seek with the Kaiser, and after London and avoiding U-boats whose commanders had orders to "get" him.

When seen at the Vanderbilt hotel he laughingly told how he evaded the Kaiser's agents, and on preventing him reaching America.

He remained in London for several days, then jumped over to France, where he apparently sailed on a "least" dozen vessels bound for the United States. He would board a vessel late at night. The German spies, seeing him go aboard, would feel satisfied they had him cornered, and early the next morning a minute before the ship sailed, Raemker would quietly slip ashore and embark on another vessel. In this manner he managed to keep the spies at a wild goose chase, and eventually sailed unobserved.

Raemker told the United Press how Germany and Kultur blighted Europe with the Kaiser's rule, and how the war today he believes the people would depose him," he declared.

"They abused him before the war for not starting one when he alone knew the Kaiser was a madman. Blood and iron are drilled into the German people from childhood. And now by a system of atrocities they are trying to bring about a physical and mental collapse of their opponents to make war so cruel that it will be shortened."

Raemker became furious as he discussed Germany. His blue eyes seemed to flash fire. He paced the floor, emphasizing his argument by pounding his fists on tables and chairs. Germans do not talk about the atrocities committed by their men," he said. "They are too terrible. Yet they are right now planning organized sympathy, for after the war, war is just trial where every man's guilt will be tried, just like any criminal. Let no spirit of revenge prevail, but mete out to every man the punishment he deserves for the part he played in the outrage."

"The German spy system is more perfect than their army. Every man is a potential spy. I am not apprehensive for his personal safety, Raemker shrugged his shoulders. "I am armed," he replied. "Against it I guard myself only by my pen. I am trying to teach."

Raemker is in America for an indefinite stay and his drawings, of the style that caused the Kaiser to pay a price on his head, will shortly appear in American newspapers and magazines.

PUBLIC DENIED PEEK AT SOCIETY MAGAZINE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] New York, Aug. 8.—Every once in a while somebody does something nobody else ever thought of doing, and puts it over all of which leads to the publication of the latest magazine published in New York, which has been called "of, for and by society."

The publishers won't admit this is the proper name to apply to it, but the fact has leaked out that certain persons who sought to become subscribers were turned down because their family histories would not stand the close scrutiny of social microscope.

The Chronicle is published monthly, at the rate of $12 a year, and is not on public sale. Just who the buyers of the project are no one seems to know. It has been said that a certain group of well known women got together and said, "That it about time that something be done to kill the idea that society does nothing but engage in butterfly balls, 'monkey dinners,' all night bathing parties, and the like? Let's get out a magazine that will show we have real thoughts and are doing real things. And let's keep it a secret."

And here enters James W. Pennock, Jr., formerly of Syracuse, N. Y., a dapper little man who talks high-browish and wears suits, ties and hose of the same shade of green, brown, and grey. He is the man you are referred to when you call at The Chronicle office at 607 Fifth ave.

"Yes I'm in charge here," he draws. "It's immaterial who the publisher of The Chronicle is. I'll answer to the direct question. 'Oh, no, it would be impossible for you to see a copy. They're for our subscribers only, and, to keep our subscribers from being known to our contributors.' Well, they're our subscribers. That is one of the basic ideas concerning The Chronicle. The terms contributors and subscribers are synonymous."

The editor is Richard Fletcher, who says: "Fawcett that now," and calls you "Old top." He's only been over from London a short while, but he says he can't tell you much about The Chronicle.

He did reveal the names of some of the subscriber-contributors during the first five months of the dollar-a-copy magazine.

Here they are: Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. O. H. Belmont, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Jay Gould, the Countess of Kingston, Sir Frederick Milner, Bart, Mrs. Muriel G. S. Draper, Whitney Warren, Mrs. William B. E. Rensselaer, Mrs. Edward B. Stetson, Mrs. William Astor Chanlor, and Gen. Leonard Wood.

"Most of these men and women have never written me any, other than 'azine,' and I don't know if I should decide to send copies to the papers I am sure you would find The Chronicle news even to them," added the editor.

Anyway, how is The Chronicle ever going to convince the public that society is 100 per cent pure if the public is never to see The Chronicle?

Eating Four Hundred Years Ago. Four hundred years ago eating was practically confined to two meals a day, but in many parts the second or evening meal was of such a protracted character that laws were passed limiting its duration.

Thus at Bern there was a law against persons sitting at table more than five hours.

At Bale from 10 o'clock in the morning to 6 o'clock in the evening was the maximum permitted, but the town council was unable to practice its own counsels of perfection and on great occasions dined in private.

In Saxony the innkeeper was forbidden to serve more than four dishes at one meal.

How They Live in Amsterdam. Housing conditions in Amsterdam among the wealthy are peculiar. Very frequently men of large business affairs have their residences in their offices and warehouse buildings. The upper floors are elegantly fitted up, while the lower floors are occupied as office quarters, or the lower floors are used for residential purposes and the upper floors are warehouses. These homes front on the canals. Household furnishings, merchandise, etc., are hoisted to the upper stories by block and tackle. Neighborhood troubles came to a head in municipal court this morning when Herman H. Rudell appeared in court charging Mrs. Ethel Joyce with having whipped and otherwise maltreated his five-year-old child. Viewing the case from the point of view of a strict neutral, Judge Maxfield surmised that the affair was one that would adjust itself out of court, if guided in the right channels. The upshot of it all after a word of caution and advice from the judge, was that everyone shook hands all around, and went home resolved to live on terms of peace and good will toward one another. The case was adjourned for one week, pending the arising of any further difficulty.

Ann Murdock, one of the most successful of the younger stage favorites, will be seen this fall in a series of three photoplays, which have been adapted from her stage successes. They are "The Beautiful Adventure," "The Imposter" and "Outcast."

Miss Murdock was given her first metropolitan engagement by Henry

B. Harris in "The Lion and the Mouse," but no sooner had the manager seen her in this play than he withdrew her to star in a new drama which was then in preparation. "Electricity" was written especially for Miss Murdock. Her first big New York hit, however, was made in "A Pair of Sixes." Charles Frohman saw the young actress in that picture and promptly engaged her. WHEN FILM STARS STAMPEDE the film agents depose and says that her jump to the Goldwyn studios is a natural sequence of any company's success in rounding up an array of stars. "The choice aim of every producer," sayeth our friend, "is to assemble on his program all the big stars in the country. And no sooner does he succeed than his troubles start. ably more publicity than the others—she feels urged to seek other quarters. The motion picture star may not be temperamental, but she certainly is insistent. It isn't half so difficult to assemble an "all-star" program as it is to keep it together.

POPULAR PAUL

It is said that Paul Willis has suddenly discovered that he has become famous in Detroit, and that a club of young girls there has formed a "Paul Willis club." Master Paul has been informed that if he wishes to become a member of his own club he must at once forward the pajamas he wore in a recent picture. Alas, poor Paul! the rose colored silk garment in question was raffled off at an "affair" just a few days ago. However, he is having another set made exactly like it for presentation to the "club."

Red Crown Gasoline Breaks Two World's Records

At the recent Auto Derby in Chicago, Ralph Mulford won the 100-mile and 200-mile prizes—breaking two world's records—in fact he led in the 250-mile race up to within 15 miles of the finish. A piece of bad luck in the nature of a blow-out forced him to stop at the pits for a new tire—even then he finished only 45 seconds late in a race that lasted two hours and twenty-five minutes.

According to the Chicago Tribune at the end of 150, and 200 miles, Mulford's time showed he had traveled those distances faster than ever man and motor went before.

Mulford made 150 miles in 1:26:49.4, and 200 miles in 1:55:11.15. His time in 250 miles was 102.5 miles per hour.

The Standard Oil Company Offers You the Same Gasoline

The gasoline Mulford used was not a special gas—it was Red Crown—the same gasoline you buy at any of our filling stations or garages listed below.

Every gallon you buy contains this same perfect range and adjustment of boiling point fractions as that which Mulford bought.

The chain of boiling point fractions commences at about 95 degrees Fahrenheit and continues without a gap beyond 400 degrees Fahrenheit, each fraction vaporizing at a different temperature.

Red Crown Gasoline gives most power, most speed and most mileage per gallon.

Cocoon Oil Fine
For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This alkali makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Just plain cocoon oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two cocoon oil tablets will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multifold cocoon oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

SICK WOMAN HAD
CRYING SPELLS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Enlist, Pa.—"I was all run down and weak inwardly. I had female troubles and nervous feelings and my head bothered me. I would often have crying spells and feel as if I was not safe. I heard anyone coming I would run and lock the door so they would not see me. I tried several doctors and they did not help me so I said to my mother, 'I guess I will have to die. There is no help for me.' She got me one of your little books and my husband said I should try one bottle. I stopped the doctor's medicine and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It soon made a change in me and now I am strong and do all my work." Mrs. AUGUSTUS BARTON, Box 38, Enlist, Pa.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out and drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

"Oh, I don't know: a million or so, I guess."

"I should think you would be rather glad of that," she told him. But when he tried to make her say why he should be glad, she talked pointedly of other things and presently went back to her father's office.

There were fine little bendings of perspiration standing on the fugitive's forehead when she left him.

After the other members of the office force had taken their departure, he still sat at his desk striving to bring himself back with some degree of clear-headedness to the pressing demands of his job. Just as he was about to give it up and go across to the Hopphouse for his dinner, William Starbuck drifted in to open the railing gate and to come and plant himself in the chair of privilege at Smith's desk.

"Well, son; you've got the animals stirred up good and plenty, at last," he said, when he had found the "makings" and was deftly rolling a cigarette—his one overlapping habit reaching back to his range-riding youth. "Dick Maxwell got a wire today from my kiddle's grandpa—and my own respected daddy-in-law—Mr. Elram Fairbairn; you know him—the lumber king."

"Dick's wire was an order; instructions from headquarters to keep hands off of your new company and to work strictly in cahoots—harmony was the word he used—with Crawford Stanton. How does that fit you?"

The financial secretary's smile was the self-congratulatory face-wrinkling of the quarry foreman who has seen his tackle hitch hold to land the big stone safely at the top of the pit.

"What is Maxwell going to do about it?" he asked.

"Dick is all wool and a yard wide; and what he signs his name to is what he is going to stand by. You won't lose him, but the wire shows us just about where we're aiming to put our leg into the gopher hole and break it, doesn't it?"

"I'm not borrowing any trouble. Mr. Fairbairn and his colleagues are just a few minutes too late. Starbuck, we've got our footing—inside of the corner."

The ex-cowpuncher, who was now well up on the middle rounds of fortune's ladder, shook his head doubtfully.

"Don't you make any brass breaks, John. Mr. Elram Fairbairn and his crowd can swing twenty millions to your one little old dollar and a half, and they're not going to leave any of the pebbles unturned when it comes to saving their investment in the Escanaba. That's all; I just thought I'd drop in and tell you."

Smith went to his rooms in the hotel a few minutes later to change for dinner. He found the linen drawer in his dressing-case overflowing. Opening another, he began to arrange the over-flow methodically. The empty drawer was lined with a newspaper, and a single headline on the upturned page sprang at him like a thing living and venomous. He bent lower and read the underrunning paragraph with a dull rage mounting to his eyes and serving for the moment to make the gray of the printed lines turn red.

Lawrenceville, May 19.—The grand jury has found a true bill against Montague Smith, the absconding casher of the Lawrenceville Bank and Trust, charged with embezzling the bank's funds. The crime would have been merely a breach of trust and not actionable but for the fact that Smith, by owning stock in the bankrupt Western Industries lately taken over by the Richardson company, had so made himself amenable to the law. Smith disappeared on the night of the 14th and is still at large. He is also wanted on another criminal count. It will be remembered that he brutally assaulted President Dunham on the night of his disappearance. The reward of $1,000 for his apprehension and arrest has been increased to $2,000 by the bank directors.

CHAPTER XI.

The Narrow World.

At the fresh newspaper reminder that his sudden bound upward from the laboring ranks to the executive headship of the irrigation project had merely made him a more conspicuous target for the man-hunters, Smith scanted himself of sleep and redoubled his efforts to put the new company on a sound and permanent footing. In the nature of things he felt that his own shift must necessarily be short. The more or less dramatic coup in Timanyoni High Line had advertised him thoroughly. He was rapidly coming to be the best-known man in Brewster, and he cherished no illusions about lost identities, or the ability to lose them. In the land where time and space have been wired and railroaded pretty well out of existence.

It was needless that he should work while the day was his in which to work; and he did work. There was still much to be done. Williams was having a threat of labor troubles at the dam, and Stillings had unearthed another possible flaw in the land titles dating back to the promotion of a certain railroad which had never gotten far beyond the paper stage and the acquiring of some of its rights of way.

Smith flung himself masterfully at the new difficulties as they arose, and earned his meed of praise from the men for whom he overcame them. But under the surface current of the hurry-business tide a bitter undertow was beginning to set in. He took his first decided backward step on the night when he went into a hardware store and bought a pistol. The free, fighting spirit which had sent him bare-handed against the three claim-jumpers was gone and in its place there was a tell determination, undefined as yet, but keying itself to the barbaric pitch.

It had been a day of nagging distractions. A rumor had been sent about by Stanton, as Smith made no doubt—hinting that the new dam would be unsafe when it should be completed; that its breaking, with the reservoir behind it, would carry death and destruction to the lowlands and even to the city. Timid stockholders, seeing colossal damage suits in the bare possibility, had taken the alarm, and Smith had spent the greater part of the day in trying to calm their fears. For this cause, and some others, he was on the ragged edge when Baldwin dropped in on his way home from the dam and protested.

"Look here, John; you're overdoing this thing without end! You break it off short, right now, and go home with me and get your dinner and a good night's rest. Get your coat and hat and come along, or I'll rope you down and hog-tie you."

For once in a way, Smith found that there was no fight left in him, and he yielded, telling himself that another acceptance of the Baldwin hospitality, more or less, could make no difference. But no sooner was the colonel's gray roadster headed for the bridge across the Timanyoni than the exhilarating reaction set in. In a twinkling the business cares, and the deeper worries as well, faded away, and in their place heart-hunger was loosed.

After dinner, a meal at which he ate little and was well content to satisfy the hunger of his soul by the road of the eye. Smith went out to the portico to smoke. The most gorgeous of mountain sunsets was painting itself upon the sky over the western Timanyoni; but he had no eyes for any natural grandeur, and no ears for any sound save one—the footstep he was listening.

"You Broken-Down Samson."

ing for. It came at length, and he tried to look as tired as he had been when the colonel made him close his desk and leave the office; tried and apparently succeeded.

"You poor, broken-down Samson, carrying all the broken gates of the money-funnies on your shoulders! You had to come to us at last, didn't you? Let me be your Delilah and fix that chair so that it will be really comfortable." She said it only half mockingly, and he forgave the sarcasm when she arranged some of the hammock pillows in the easiest of the porch chairs and made him bury himself luxuriously in them.

Still holding the idea, brought over from that afternoon of the name-questioning, that she had in some way discovered his true identity, Smith was watching narrowly for danger-signals when he thanked her and said:

"You say it just as it is. I had to come. But you could never be anybody's Delilah, could you? She was a betrayer, if you recollect."

He made the suggestion purposely, but it was wholly ignored, and there was no guile in the slate-gray eyes.

"You mean that you didn't want to come?"

"No; not that. I have wanted to come every time your father has asked me. But there are reasons—good reasons—why I shouldn't be here."

If she knew any of the reasons she made no sign. She was sitting in the hammock and touching one slipped toe to the flagstones for the swinging push. From Smith's point of view she had for a background the gorgeous sunset, but he could not see the more distant glories.

"We owe you much, and we are going to owe you more," she said. "You mustn't think that we don't appreciate you at your full value. Colonel-daddy thinks you are the most wonderful somebody that ever lived, and so do a lot of the others."

"And you?" he couldn't resist saying. "I'm just plain ashamed—for the way I treated you when you were here before. I've been eating humble-pie ever since."

Smith breathed freer. Nobody but a most consummate actress could have simulated her frank sincerity. He had jumped too quickly to the small sum-in-addition conclusion. She did not know the story of the absconding bank cashier.

"I don't know why you should feel that way," he said, eager now, to run where he had before been afraid to walk.

"I do. And I believe you wanted to shame me. I believe you gave up your place at the dam and took hold with daddy more to show me what an inconsequent little idiot I was than for any other reason. Didn't you, really?"

He laughed in quiet ecstasy at this newest and most adorable of the moods.

"Honest confession is good for the soul; I did," he boasted. "Now beat that for frankness, if you can."

"I can't," she admitted, laughing back at him. "But now you've accomplished your purpose, I hope you are not going to give up. That would be a little hard on colonel-daddy."

"Oh, no; I'm not going to give up—until I have to."

"Does that mean more than it says?"

"Yes, I'm afraid it does."

She was silent for the length of time that it took the flaming crimson in the western sky to fade to salmon. The colonel had mounted the steps and was coming toward them. The young woman slipped from the hammock and stood up.

"Don't go," said Smith, feeling as if he were losing an opportunity and leaving much unsaid that ought to be said. But the answer was a quiet "good night" and she was gone.

Smith went back to town with the colonel the next morning physically rested, to be sure, but in a frame of mind bordering again upon the sardonic. One thing stood out clearly: he was most unmistakably in love with Corona Baldwin.

Hence there was another high resolve not to go to Ellierest again until he could go as a free man; a resolve which, it is perhaps needless to say, was broken thereafter as often as the colonel asked him to go. Why, in the last resort, Smith should have finally chosen a confidant in the person of William Starbuck, the reformed cowpuncher, he scarcely knew. But it was to Starbuck that he appealed for advice when the sentimental situation had grown fairly desperate.

SILLYSONNETS

PACKING, STORING DRIED VEGETABLES; HOW IT IS DONE

Washington, Aug. 8.—Now we come to the packing and storing of the fruits and vegetables you have dried. Although not necessary, tin cans and jars make good receptacles for storing dried products.

Paste-board boxes with tight covers, stout paper bags and paraffined paper cartons also offer ample protection for dried fruits and things, when protected from insects and rodents.

The products must be protected from the outside moisture and will keep best in a cool, dry, well-ventilated place. In humid regions air tight containers should be used. If you pack just enough for a meal, each container it will not be necessary to open a container the contents of which cannot be consumed in a short time.

If a paper bag is used the upper part should be twisted into a neck, bent over and tied tightly with twine. You might also paint it with a brush dipped in melted paraffin. You might also use an added precaution by putting the bags in a tin container with a tight fitting cover, such as a lard can or pail. Label all bags to show what they contain.

If fruits or vegetables are packed in tight containers immediately upon being thoroughly dried they will remain just as brittle as when taken from the drier. If not dried thoroughly they will soon mold. To prevent this the material should be examined within 24 hours after packing it and if it appears moist it must be dried further.

ROCK COUNTY SECOND FOR TOBACCO CROP

Government Figures Show That 7,000 Acres in County Are Under Tobacco.—Big Prices.

Rock county is the second county in the state in tobacco production this year, according to estimates prepared by J. P. Colander, field agent of the United States department of agriculture. Seven thousand acres in the county are under tobacco, with prospects of a larger crop than has ever been known, selling at unheard of prices.

In the entire state 48,200 acres are given over this year to the production of tobacco, an increase of ten per cent over last year's acreage, which was 43,600. Wisconsin ranks as the seventh state in tobacco growing, and has steadily increased her crop since 1912, when but 40,000 acres were raised.

Dane county leads in acreage, having 18,000 acres under cultivation. Vernon county is third with 8,000 acres. Crawford county devotes about 2,500 acres to tobacco; Chippewa and Dunn counties, 1,500 acres, and Green county, 800 acres.

Practically all of the tobacco in this section has already been contracted for. Buyers were in the field early, and have pushed the most vigorous campaign in the history of the local market. Prices ranged all the way from twelve cents to twenty-five cents, with many acres selling under twenty cents, the buyer agreeing to take all the risks.

Straight prices have run up as high as twenty cents, and will average between eighteen and twenty. The crop bids fair to be a record one unless unforeseen conditions arise, and throughout the whole county tobacco is well along now, despite the late season.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Hoyt will answer in this paper all questions on matters of etiquette addressed to her. In care of this paper. If a personal answer is desired enclose a two-cent stamp.)

Copy to go with mat no. 11. No spoiling of servants is permissible in a hotel. If they are negligent or disrespectful complain to the housekeeper or landlord; it is their duty to keep the domestics on order, not that of their guests.

Since you have no immediate family, your wedding invitations should read: "The honor of your presence is requested at the marriage of Miss Sylvia Mae Harned and Mr. Henry Wells Jordan, on Saturday afternoon, June the thirtieth, at four o'clock, Grace Episcopal Church. As your cousin and husband are to give you a reception, an extra card should be slipped into each invitation for those you wish to ask. It should read: 'Mr. and Mrs. William Vincent at home on Saturday, June the thirtieth, at half after four o'clock.' This fixes the reception for half an hour after the ceremony, which means that it follows immediately.

E. L. M.: When a young man goes away, he should write first to the young lady. If the young lady goes she should not write to the young man unless he asks her to do so. Advance of this kind should always come from the gentleman.

MINIATURE BATTLES AT BIG STATE FAIR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 8.—Wisconsin's state fair will present to visitors a miniature European battlefield.

Real trenches, barbed wire entanglements, mines, all types of the smaller field guns, a warship model, submarine, gas, submarine, war planes, torpedoes, and other engines of destruction which are to be used in the clash of democracy against autocracy will be exhibited.

Much interest is aroused in the proposed exhibition. More than an acre of ground will be used in the war miniature and it will be known as the government "Liberty Exhibit."

HEARTY WELCOME IS ACCORDED AMERICANS

children and French soldiers, every one from first to third class, leaped out of the train and shook hands with us as they passed. It was rather a novel experience, as our train was going about twenty-five miles per hour and the other forty.

"This little incident shows how anxious the French are to welcome America. It is the same everywhere. They will do anything possible for their gratitude. We asked one little fellow—he was about ten years old probably—why he liked the Americans. 'I love them because they come,' was his ready reply.

"In Paris we met a private secretary of the French minister of war. He had been at the front for thirty-two months, had won his Croix de Guerre and had been wounded in the foot when he led his little company of thirty men through two hundred Boches who had surrounded them, and left them with his Croix de Guerre, and death or forcing their way through to their own lines.

"We passed through, fifteen of us, I guess, the sergeant said, but we are just like devils. They can't stop us."

"I have never seen a man who was a greater lover of peace. He was small and as fair skinned as a lady. But so are all the French. They love peace, but their love of liberty is as strong as that of our own ancestors. When that liberty is threatened they throw aside everything and fight like demons.

"France has given the best of her manhood; she has given us her best everything in her country, and as she helped us in our fight for liberty we have got to help her.

"You long ago read of the great enthusiasm here when our soldiers marched through Paris July Fourth. Newspaper accounts can't possibly express the joy all France felt that day. It was a more observed holiday here than it generally is in the States. Everything you see, everyone you meet, makes you heart jump to think that you are an American and are able to do your little bit for a people who appreciate it as the French do."

"At the Paris headquarters we learned of a few more 'bum steers' we had received in the States. Better uniforms than we were able to buy can be had here for less money, and much of the stuff we were instructed to buy has been left in Paris, useless. Fortunately, the Janesville unit was able to use the experience of first class campers before it left home, so we didn't get as badly stung as the other fellows. The only things that we find high here—that is, among things we need in our stay—are shoes and sweet chocolate. We found a good stock of the former, but the latter is sky high, but we buy it just the same.

"We were three days in Paris getting our papers fixed up, our equipment completed, and our registration in the French army. Over half of those who came over with us went into the Camion work. They have regular hours every day and drive ammunition and transport trucks. The work is heavier than ambulance work, but one has a definite number of hours on and off, which is far different from our work. Otherwise there is little difference in the two branches. Both are under the American Field Service and wear the same uniform. France needs men in the ambulance work and needs them badly, so the field service usually places all physically fit men who are over twenty-one in that branch. The expense in either service is the same.

"We don't need any more Ford cars as we have more than we need now. Ambulance men now are taking over the French ambulance sections instead of forming new Ford sections. The French sections have two men to each car who take turns driving, and they drive French gear-shift cars. Otherwise the two ambulance divisions are the same.

"My artistic ability is wanting or I would make a chart of the hospitals and our routes. Our work is to carry the wounded from the 'Postes de Secours' to the stretchers, to the sorting or field hospitals. From the sorting hospitals we carry them to the special hospitals (base hospitals) or to trains.

"The men are brought down through communication trenches to the poste de secours after dark as the trenches are used in light to carry the wounded. In 1914 the Germans held this section for seven days, and used our barracks as headquarters. It is a mighty interesting section, I assure you. Short distance away is the main road, which was originally built by Julius Caesar. In a nearby village is a church built in the twelfth century and still in use. In the next proof which was used as a machine gun trench. In another direction is a series of barbed wire entanglements and French trenches. We have explored everything to the limit. The same village has a number of Boche prisoners working in the fields. They are glad of their lot as they are well treated and comfortable, which is better than the trenches.

"When the Boches took the village they smashed up everything that was breakable at all. I have seen several mirrors which they broke. They smashed the only piano in the town and drank all the wine they could. One woman was unable to get away before they came and they ordered her to get them some wine. Her husband had to obey their command and while he was gone they shot her through the arm. The arm was later amputated, but she died. To a beautiful chateau which we visited Sunday was ravaged by the Germans also. One room contained a great many beautiful and valuable paintings, every one of which was riddled with bullet holes. Mirrors and busts of Napoleon were treated in the same manner. Five hundred quarts of champagne were consumed.

"Another village near here has an old castle built in the fourteenth century. This is the castle of the dukes of Louis XIV. We climbed all over the building and made real the stories of medieval castles.

"Since we arrived in France two men in our service have been killed and one or two wounded. I think both the dead ones got the Croix de Guerre. Five others were reported killed, but they haven't been reported in as far as we take their places, so it probably isn't true.

"After we left Paris we were brought out here by train. We are now in the war zone, but some distance from the front. We see several planes every day and hear the big guns, but otherwise it is quite peaceful.

"We are part of the French army and take regular drill three hours a day under a French sergeant. The commands are given in French and we execute them in the same tongue. That is, we drill as the French army does and not as the U. S. army. The difference is very slight.

"We are allowed to send one letter a day P. M. (We say free mail, but it really is 'Francaise Militaire'). Our food is that of the poilu or French soldier, and we receive the same pay (at the front about 28 cents a day, less a great deal when on repo). The field service has arranged to have that money added to the food budget so that our food is better than that of the poilu. Even at that, it is far inferior to the food of the U. S. army, but we don't kick. It is good, well cooked and wholesome.

"Our dinner today is a good sample. We had pot roast of beef, French fried potatoes, black bread, apple butter and red wine. The meat was much more tender than usual. For breakfast we have the usual French petit déjeuner, consisting of coffee (thick, brought by milk) or hot milk and black bread. We generally buy some jam to go with this meal, as it is too petit. Supper is a little heavier than dinner. Soup, meat and potatoes, beans or spaghetti, and lettuce salad, and the usual red wine. Sweets are scarce. Occasionally they say we get pot roast of horse, but I haven't seen any of it yet.

"We are quartered in a mill now. Both Loomis and I have passed our driving tests on Fords and gear-shift so expect to be sent out into a Ford vacancy or a gear-shift section any moment. We have a hunch we will be assigned to Ford section 13, stationed in one of the hottest fields. Sunday night a man came in from section 8, which is in the same territory. We have talked with him a great deal about the work, etc., there, so have a better idea of the innumerable hardships in store for us.

"We are mighty grateful to the people of Janesville and Edgerton who have made it possible for us to help France and do our bit in this struggle for liberty. Will write again from 'Out there' if time can be found. 'Give my regards to everyone.' 'ALONZO W. POND.'"
